A Meaningful Visit from Our Champion Team: Paying Tribute to Atatürk at Anıtkabir

Following their championship victory in Cyprus, our Middle School Boys' Basketball Team took the court once again—this time at the regional tournament held in Gaziantep. With great confidence and determination, our team outperformed all their rivals, securing consecutive victories and earning the right to compete in the Turkey Finals. Now proudly preparing to represent our school at the final stage in Konya, our students crowned this unforgettable journey with a meaningful visit.

At the end of their journey to the finals, our students visited Anıtkabir. They paid their respects in silence before Gazi Mustafa Kemal Atatürk, the founder of the Republic of Turkey. This meaningful visit is not merely a tradition; it is a powerful reflection of the core values that shape the educational philosophy of Levent College.

At Levent College, we emphasize our students' character development equally as we do on academic and athletic achievement. Guided by Atatürk's timeless words, "I like the athlete who is intelligent, agile, and moral," we believe that sports are not just a means of physical development, but also a path to mental and ethical growth. Similarly, Atatürk's profound statement, "It is education that either elevates a nation to independence, glory, and greatness or leaves it in bondage and misery," reminds us of the depth and responsibility embedded in our approach to education.

The visit to Anıtkabir became a deeply symbolic moment, strengthening our students' sense of history and embodying the internalization of national and universal values. These students are not just athletes; they understand their heritage, embrace their nation's values, and stride into the future with awareness and purpose.

At Levent College, we seek success on scoreboards and our students' posture, vision, and values.

Touching the Sky: Erdinç Becomes Turkey's High Jump Champion

Our Interview with Turkey's Middle School High Jump Champion, Erdinç İnçay. At Levent Times, we had the privilege of sitting down with Erdinç İnçay, who recently claimed the title of Turkey's Middle School High Jump Champion. In our inspiring conversation, Erdinç shared his passion for sports, the path that led him to the top, and the mindset behind his success.

How did your journey in high jump begin?

My interest in athletics started when I tried high jump during a training session. When my coach noticed my jumping ability, he encouraged me to focus on this event. The excitement I felt after clearing the bar on my first attempt made me think, "There's something special here."

Did you ever imagine becoming the champion of Turkey?

Yes, I dreamed of it—but I didn't expect it to happen this soon. During every training, I imagined myself on the podium. I used to tell myself, "One day, I'll be Turkey's Champion." Now, that dream has come true.

How did you manage your nerves on competition day?

Competition days are full of excitement. I kept my focus by taking deep breaths and trusting in my preparation. Before each jump, I said, "You can do this."

Could you tell us about the moment you won?. What went through your mind?

When I cleared 1.78 meters, the crowd erupted in applause. Then, I heard the words "Turkey Champion"—my eyes filled with tears. I locked eyes with my coach and thought, "We did it." It was an indescribable moment.

What does your training routine look like?

I train five days a week, from Tuesday to Saturday. My program includes technical drills, strength training, flexibility work, and mental preparation. I train regularly and with discipline to improve every single day.

Were there difficult moments? How did you overcome them?

Absolutely. It was discouraging when I couldn't clear the heights I aimed for. But my coach and I analyzed what went wrong, trained harder, and continued. I didn't give up.

What sacrifices have you made for success?

I gave up time with friends and games. I even trained during holidays. But it was worth every bit—because success doesn't come without sacrifice.

How do you balance school and sports?

I plan my time carefully: training after school, studying in the evenings. My teachers and family have supported me tremendously through this journey. Erdinç's perseverance, discipline, and determination tell the story of an athlete and an actual role model. His journey reminds us how powerful it can be to chase our dreams and never give up.

As the Levent College family, we congratulate Erdinç from the heart and wish him continued success in every leap he takes—both on the field and in life.
